North Branford Intermediate School, North Branford, CT
Newman Architects, LLC, New Haven, CT

Photographer: Robert Benson Photography

Jury comment: In this renovation and addition, the architects have used a careful combination of composition and scale change to bread up and individualize what was a mundane 60's school. Careful use of materials indicates the shifting functions inside and creates an identity for each teaching unit.

Fairfield Jesuit Community Center, Fairfield University, Fairfield, CT
Gray Organschi Architecture, New Haven, CT

Photographer: Robert Benson Photography

Jury comment: The center reflects an intuitive connection between the mission of calm, meditative, and community spirit with a plan that reflects spatial balance between individual and communal life. The building captures views; the use of natural materials is confident and tranquil. The jury cited this project for special commendation.

The Bridge House, Kent, CT
Joeb Moore + Partners Architects, Greenwich, CT

Photographer: David Sundberg/ Esto

Jury comment: Set in a dramatic landscape, 300 feet above Kent falls, this house is poised carefully on its site, allowing the site to flow through the house. The jury was fascinated with the play of warm and cool texture and color. The house also responds to the seasons with carefully framed views, it also provides intricate and warm interior viewing chambers.

44 PL, Greenwich, CT
Joeb Moore + Partners Architects, Greenwich, CT

Photographer: David Sundberg/Esto

Jury comment: This single family residence sited on a series of long retaining walls takes the form of a traditional New England house, and by abstraction and use of materials takes its vernacular inspiration to a heightened level of sculptural modernity. The architect sustained the rigor of scale throughout, enabling a considerably sized house to take its place easily on this site.

Spiral House, Old Greenwich, CT
Joeb Moore + Partners Architects, Greenwich, CT

Photographer: Jeff Goldberg/Esto

Jury comment: Beautifully drawn and equally well executed, this house, poised on the edge of Long Island Sound, traces a spiral from entry to upper chambers. Poised like a heron, the house distills its vernacular and modernist sensibilities in a spare aesthetic of calm and elegance.

Gray Organschi Architecture, New Haven, CT

Photographer: Bo Crockett

Jury comment: In this group of garden pavilions, the architects have achieved, with extreme simplicity and economy of materials, a flexible set of seating and living shelters. These combine to make space. These objects are both furniture and architecture luminous at night and textured by day. The fabrication of panels is ingenious. The jury was very impressed.

Cottage, Guilford, CT
Gray Organschi Architecture, New Haven, CT

Photographer: Bo Crockett

Jury comment: This small guest house, with its green roof, takes the simplicity of a cube and the vernacular of New England geometry and abstracts into an elegant play of cubic and diagonal geometrics. The jury was impressed with the spare use of materials that reinforces the simplicity of form. It sits on the site lightly and with grace.

UNBUILT DESIGN

Mill River Park Canopy, Stamford, CT
Gray Organschi Architecture, New Haven, CT

Jury comment: Using a series of delicate experiments with the topological characteristics of wood, the proponents have created a delicately woven canopy along the river walk that elegantly illustrates a stitched connection between river and city.

Jury comment: This submission truly fulfills the intent of this category, making connection from detail to the whole. It rescues damaged European beech from the site to fabricate altar furniture in such a way as to preserve the grain of wood and at the same time to celebrate the meditative simplicity of the whole.
